Introduction

Punyak, word comes from the word Punya i.e., merit / virtue. The region between the Sahyadri mountains shaped the geographical, political, economic, social, and cultural life of Pune. The city on the confluence of two rivers i.e., Mula and Mutha, played a crucial role in the settlement of humans in this area along with the rivulet like Nag and Ambil.

This timeline is titled timeline of Punyak, Poona, and Pune attempt to represent three significant era in the history of Pune. Punyak, literally translate into merit or virtue, symbolizes the early phase from 8th century common era onwards with minor variations. Poona, the colonial period name of the city, the period during which the city became cosmopolitan and people as well as goods from different corners of the world began appearing in the city. Pune, the name during the Peshwai and after the independence, used to identify the city. This is more than the name of the city also encompasses the culture and vibe of the city.

The Pune City served as a pivotal urban center for more than 1300 year all together, right from the Chalukyas, Rashtrakutas, Devgiri Yadavas, Bahamani, Nizamshahi, Adilshahi, Maratha State, Peshwai, British Colonial rule and even during Independent India.

2. Annexure A: Name Pune

Following is the list of name variations of Pune found in the various sources mentioning this area:

1. Punya Vishaya
2. Punaka Vishaya
3. Punaka Wadi
4. Punnaka
5. Purnaka
6. Punyapur
7. Purnanagar
8. Kasbe Pune
9. Punawadi
10. Puna
11. Punna
12. Poona
13. Ponah
14. Poonah
15. Pune

The name Punyak comes from the word Punya means merit or virtue. Geographically Pune is situated at the confluence of the Mula and Mutha rivers. These rivers originate in the Western ghats that meet each other in Pune and the area of their meeting is called Sangam i.e., Confluence. Alongside these rivers there were two temples called Puneswar and Narayaneshwar, later during late 13th Century CE these temples were converted into Younger Sheikh Salla and Older Sheikh Salla.

The travelers or traders commencing their journey from the western coast traversing Sahyadri Mountain ranges with hard labor before railways and airways, coming to the region of Pune that facilitates water of Mula-Mutha confluence, plain fertile land and here onwards geographically speaking relatively convenient journey into the interiors of the Deccan. Due to these natural conditions the area might have been called as Punyak.

With time the minor variations in the name occurred and Kasbe Pune became the significant town with the amalgamation of three villages Kumbharli, Kasarli, and Punewadi. By the time of 1600s the Kasbe Pune turned into Kasba peth in the city called Pune and one after another 18 peths were added in the Pune during the 17th and 18th centuries. By different able administrators of the Pune.

During the British colonial administration, Pune was called as Poona due to the convenience of pronunciation to the Britishers, and again after independence the Poona was renamed as Pune.

3. Annexure B: Population of Pune

The Pune city experienced diverse composition of population from the eighteenth century onwards as it was made residence of Peshwa from Bajirao I, onwards and the economic, political, and military nature for Pune of colonial State during British rule gave multi-cultural identity to the city.

Period from 1740 to 1780, the city experienced consistent rise in the population due to the political stability facilitated by the Peshwas. From 1780s onwards various internal and external factors i.e., nature of rule during Bajirao II, political and military factors involved due to the Peshwa, Holkar, Shinde and British relations with each other.

From the 1850s onwards the arrival of post, telegraph, railways and administrative reforms in terms of local government created suitable situations for the increase in the numbers of inhabitants of the city. Only in the last decade of the 19th century was there a little decrease in the population of Pune due to the spread of the Plague.

1950s, experienced growth in the total population of the city with merger of Poona Municipality and Poona Suburban Municipality in the year 1950.

5. Annexure D: Gardens in Pune

The Pune during the 18th century under the Peshwai flourished as a major urban center in India and because of Political seat of the Maratha State, gardens were developed in and around Pune during the Peshwa rule. Approximately 37 gardens were reported in Pune during this period.

Following are some names of the gardens during Peshwa rule:

Hira, Saras, Vasant, Moti, Parvati, Bunglow, Wanwadi, Hingne, Ramana, Wadgaon, Manik, Pashan, Katraj, Kothrud, Bel, Tulshi, Nana later called Natu, etc.

During the colonial British rule Bund Garden, Empress, Budhwar, Sambhaji, Jijamata, Daruwala, Shivaji Park, Khadi Maidan, Powerhouse, Kumbharwada. These few gardens were set up during colonial rule. As a nature of colonial rule aesthetics for the benefit and health of the people of Pune city was not the priority of the government during British rule, the gardens of Peshwa period were neglected and firstly due to the removal of State patronage these gardens slowly and steadily disappeared and secondly the expanding city area required more space for constructing utility building like residential, commercial, administrative purposes. As a result of the combining effect of both causes the numbers and size of Gardens in Pune kept on shrinking during the colonial rule.

After Independence and the establishment of Pune Municipal Corporation till the concern time following gardens were set up in Pune:

Peshwe, Erandwana, Ghorpade, Shaniwarwada garden, Shivaji Talav (Swimming Pool) garden, Chhatrpati Shahu Garden. Around 18 Gardens were there at the time of 1950. The Pune Municipal Corporation created a post called Garden Superintendent on 1st April 1950 to look after all gardens in Pune.
